DETAILED ACTION

Receipt is acknowledged of the response filed on September 29, 2008, which has been entered in the file.

Claim Objections

1. Claims 6, 16, 19, 42 are objected to because of the following informalities:

Please clarify what "it" is referring to.

Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

3. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

4. Claims 16 and 19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

As set forth in MPEP 2106 (II) (A):

A. Identify and Understand Any Practical Application Asserted for the Invention

The claimed invention as a whole must accomplish a practical application. That is, it must produce a "useful, concrete and tangible result." State Street, 149 F.3d at 1373, 47 USPQ2d at 1601-02. The purpose of this requirement is to limit patent protection to inventions that possess a certain level of "real world" value, as opposed to subject matter that represents nothing more than an idea or concept, or is simply a starting point for future investigation or research (Brenner v. Manson, 383 U.S. 519, 528-36, 148 USPQ 689, 693-96); In re Ziegler, 992, F.2d 1197, 1200-03, 26 USPQ2d 1600,1603-06 (Fed. Cir. 1993)). Accordingly, a complete disclosure should contain some indication of the practical application for the claimed invention, i.e., why the applicant believes the claimed invention is useful.

Apart from the utility requirement of 35 U.S.C. 101, usefulness under the patent eligibility standard requires significant functionality to be present to satisfy the useful result aspect of the practical application requirement. See Arrhythmia, 958 F.2d at 1057, 22 USPQ2d at 1036. Merely claiming nonfunctional descriptive material stored in a computer-readable medium does not make the invention eligible for patenting. For example, a claim directed to a word processing file stored on a disk may satisfy the utility requirement of 35 U.S.C. 101 since the information stored may have some "real world" value. However, the mere fact that the claim may satisfy the utility requirement of 35 U.S.C. 101 does not mean that a useful result is achieved under the practical application requirement. The claimed invention as a whole must produce a "useful, concrete and tangible" result to have a practical application.

2. Claims 16 and 19 are non-statutory. Because claims 16 and 19 includes a computer program product.

Re claim 16, "A program product" was not specifically described in the specification what is program product is referring to. The applicant simply discloses a program for producing the information code,

Re claim 19, "A computer program" is not statutory subject matter, non-functional descriptive material.

Allowable Subject Matter

3. Claims 1, 4-15, 17, 18, 20-25, 27-45 are allowed.
4. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

None of prior art teaches a product providing a first information code having a plurality of first reference positions arranged to redundantly code at least one first information element by means of a plurality of marks wherein the plurality of marks associated with one of the first reference positions, and the product further providing a second information code having a plurality of second reference positions which constitute a selection from the plurality of first reference positions and at least one additional information is coded by the second information code by at least one mark belong to the first information code that is intentionally omitted such that the one of the plurality of second reference positions does not have an associated marks, a method of coding comprising coding of additional information element in the information code by allocation a value to at least one of the plurality of marks which value indicates that the mark is to be omitted during the application of information code on a product and the information code comprises a plurality of reference position wherein each plurality of marks is associated with the reference positions and each information element is coded by a set of predetermined number of reference position with associated marks as set forth in the claims.

Any comments considered necessary by applicant must be submitted no later than the payment of the issue fee and, to avoid processing delays, should preferably accompany the issue fee. Such submissions should be clearly labeled "Comments on Statement of Reasons for Allowance."

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1, 4-25, 27-45 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
